GERMAN CONSUL BOPP TO PLEAD TOMORROW

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—When German Consul Bopp came up for arraignment today on the charge of bomb plotting, it was found his case was not on the calendar. Hence, upon the motion of his attorneys, the pleading went over to tomorrow.

Other persons, charged variously with bomb plotting or neutrality violations in the "Sacramento expedition," either pleaded not guilty or had their cases continued one week for pleading.

Indictments brought originally in the Sacramento case were dismissed, as the new indictments supersede them.

Silver Sword of Hawaii.

One of the most curious plants in the world and one of the greatest interest to all botanists is the silver sword. This exceedingly rare plant, with its magnificent silver spines and handsome crest, may still be found in profusion in the upper part of Kaupapa, the southern outlet of the vast extinct crater of Haleakala, on the island of Maui. It flowers from July to October and occurs hardly anywhere else in the world. Even stranger is the variety known as the green sword, which occurs only in Haleakala crater and is unknown to exist elsewhere.—Honolulu Star Bulletin

Prince Henry the Navigator.

The kingdom of Portugal counted in its royal house one of the men who hold first rank in scientific attainment and practical application. He was the son of John I. of Portugal and Queen Philippa, who was an English princess. He spent his life in sending out ships on voyages of discovery, and it was through this Prince Henry, called "the Navigator," that Columbus got his idea of seeking for a new land across the sea.

NO STARVATION IN GERMANY IS SEEN

Merely Thought of Hunger Has Produced Existing Outcry.

NEVER WANT FOR ANY FOOD

German Stomach, Accustomed to an Overabundance, Is Being Improved by the Regulations—Prices Have Been Only Slightly Advanced—Eating About 15 Per Cent Less.

The German stomach is an imperious organ, very jealous of its economic rights, very touchy, accustomed to be overnourished. To trifle with its habits entails perilous political consequences. For many years it has carried on a winning feud with those who speculate in its needs for private gain. And now it bates England and clamors for the vengeance of heaven not on account of anything it has suffered, which, according to German scientists, is no more than was good for it, but because England threatened to starve it. Really it has never been hungry since the war began. If its condition had been at any time so uncomfortable as the world supposed it to be the war had then been ended, says a Berlin correspondent of the New York Times.

There is no scarcity of food in Germany actually. That is to say, there now is and has been always plenty to eat. There has been only too little of this or that, made up for by more than enough of something else. A deficit of grain is offset by an abundance of potatoes, a deficit of meat by an increased supply of fish, a deficit of fat by an abundance of honey, and so on. And as the war has now gone through two harvests, as conditions tend rather to improve than to become worse and as the surplus food production of Roumania, Bulgaria and Turkey now is added to the resources of Germany and Austria-Hungary. It is not easy to imagine how the German people are going to be starved. They are eating, statistically, perhaps 15 per cent less than they normally would and yet, perhaps, 10 per cent more than they need to eat. The case is somewhat better than the statistical statement would imply, since, owing to rigid methods of regulation, much waste of distribution is eliminated. A country that has normally produced only 85 per cent of its own food, suddenly cut off from its outside supplies, must be supposed to have a deficit of 15 per cent, but where formerly was waste and now is none the people will be able to consume 85 per cent of the normal amount plus the former waste, which now they also eat. That alone is a considerable factor, though it cannot be statistically expressed.

Meeting Kriegsbrot.

On entering Germany for the first time since the war began one has certain disagreeable expectations. One feels the weight of much beautiful white Dutch bread consumed in Holland, camel fashion. Here are 65,000,000 people living on diminished rations. One is prepared to see their stomachs through their eyes and to be regarded oneself with envy as a well fed visitor from the outside world, where there is everything to eat. It is true that the color, texture and quality of bread change abruptly. At the frontier station is "Kriegsbrot" (war bread), brown, sliced very thin and a little soggy. On the walls are posters reminding travelers of their obligation to eat moderately in wartime. But the outlet is very good, the gravy rich, the potatoes delicious, the coffee only Prussian, and the cost is altogether 2 marks and 60 pfennigs—that is, about 75 cents. This is really not so bad, and on second scrutiny the people look not in the least undernourished. On the railway station counter are cakes and things like pies and ham and cheese and sausage sandwiches. On the spelsewagen, proceeding toward Berlin, the bread is lighter, in the form of rolls; there is anything one wants to eat, including butter, and one begins to part with one's recollections of the last meal in Holland. At the hotel the next morning one receives with breakfast his daily bread card, but here the bread is really very good. It is a meatless day, the waiter tells you. For lunch there is sole and other fish, with plenty of potatoes and dainty things in sauce; but, of course, this is luxurious living. For dinner one goes to a popular restaurant to see what a meatless day is really like. There one has poached eggs, fried potatoes, string beans in sauce, and herring, with coffee and very palatable bread, for about 50 cents.

"Living," says the pro-German American resident, "is still cheaper in Berlin than New York, although prices have gone up about 30 per cent on the average. Here, for example," pointing it out on the bill of fare, "is a dish at 1 mark and 30 pfennigs that was for merely 1 mark; another at 1 mark 60 pfennigs that was 1 mark 20 pfennigs before, and so on down the list. Beer and wine have not gone up at all."

Coins Words to Describe Wife.

Two brand new words were introduced by a young husband in a police court in Baltimore to describe his wife's attitude toward him, and, though they are not in the dictionaries, the magistrate declared they were eloquent. One is "growlome" and the other "fussified."

Ship of the Desert.

For safety and endurance in traveling in desert regions the camel has been found unequaled by any other animal. Its foot is a soft cushion, peculiarly well adapted to the stones and gravel over which it is constantly walking. During a single journey through the Sahara horses have worn out three sets of shoes, while the feet of the camel, traveling over the same course were not even sore.

Two Sinners.

"It is very wrong to tell a falsehood," said his mother to little Jimmie, whom she had caught in one.

"Then we're both off at sinners, ain't we, ma?" queried Jimmie.

"Both? What do you mean?"

"Why, you told Mrs. Smith yesterday that you hoped she'd call again, and after she was gone you said you wished she'd never come again."
